Dear Harold,

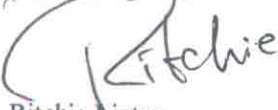

Please accept our thanks once again for the generous hospitality provided in your home. Gary and I both always greatly enjoy our visits, and of course appreciate your giving us access to your records, especially since we disagree on parts of the case. From our discussions, it doesn't seem that we are that far apart, in other ways. We all seem to agree that members of the military were up to no good, and for us, one of the questions to ask is what would have happened had the successor government done other than it did, and tried to strike back. Who do you send to arrest the army, if you know what I mean.

On that subject I return herewith your manuscript which I have copied with your permission, for which I also thank-you. I look forward to reading it, and if you are at all interested in a further response, let me know. Gary has a copy as well, and I am sure we would both be happy to forward our comments if you think they might be of any value.

I have also enclosed a couple of records that I thought you might be interested in if you don't already have them. Looks to me like Blakey made a deal with the devil.

Our best to Lillian and our thanks to you both once again.

Kindest regards,
